A Message From Meschel Hara

This month our elementary students are learning about being content, which is a good lesson for us all, no matter our age. How do we know that contentment is a character of God? One of the ten commandments that God gave us through Moses is to not covet, which means that we should not have an unreasonable desire for what someone else has. And then in Galatians Paul teaches us that a fruit of the Spirit is self-control.

I think we can learn best from Paul who tells us that he knew the secret of being content in Philippians Chapter 4. He had taught himself how to be content in all circumstances, whether he was going through a point of his life where he was in need or experiencing a time of abundance. No matter his circumstance, he truly trusted that God would meet his needs and praised Him for that.

When my kids were growing up we watched a lot of Veggie Tales; and I can't help but think of Madame Blueberry, who also learned the importance of being thankful and content. The salesmen from Stuff Mart tricked her into believing that she couldn't truly be happy unless she filled her desires of purchasing more stuff. And they were really good at tempting her with all the things that would make her happy so much so that one day her treehouse toppled over because it was too full.

As Thanksgiving approaches, may we practice being thankful, content and generous with our blessings.
